The teaching and learning pedagogy at Cranbourne Primary School is developed on a RECIPE (Relevant Engaging Challenging Innovative Personalized Enjoyable) based curriculum that supports the members of the school community to develop intrinsic PRIDE (Persistence Responsibility Independence Discipline Enthusiasm) in their learning.

PRINCIPAL'S NEWS

The news of the events in Paris this weekend has sent ripples of unrest across communities throughout the world. It is important that the actions of radical individuals do not promote prejudice between us and wedge barriers within our community. It is also our responsibility to support young people at this time. Children and young people take their cues from the adults around them and will therefore develop their own beliefs based on the reactions they observe and the opinions they hear.

If your child is asking questions that you are unsure how to answer, DET advise for you to:

- be honest, calm, compassionate and open
- acknowledge that the event was distressing
- monitor your child’s exposure to television coverage, print media and social media.
- reassure children that they are safe
- separate fact from fiction e.g. children may express fears about unrelated events.

Curriculum

SunSmart

Cranbourne Primary School is a SunSmart school. This means that we have a school policy that meets the guidelines set down by the Cancer Council. The following is taken from our current SunSmart policy:

Rationale:
A healthy UV exposure balance is important for health. Over exposure to the sun presents a serious health risk. Some sun exposure helps with Vitamin D. Students must therefore be educated as to the need for some sun exposure and suitable sun protection, and be protected from over exposure to the sun whilst at school.

Aims:
To educate students as to suitable Sunsmart protection strategies.
To encourage children and teachers to get some sun exposure for Vitamin D.
To protect themselves from the harmful effects of over exposure to the sun.

This policy ensures that all students and staff at Cranbourne Primary School are protected from over exposure to the sun whilst at school.

- Students are able to bring their own broad-spectrum water resistant sunscreen (SPF30+ or higher) to school, to apply themselves for outdoor activities
- Students are expected to wear the school council approved bucket hats for outdoor activities.

If your child has misplaced their hat, then please purchase a replacement hat from Beleza. If your child does not have a hat, then their access to the playground is restricted during recess and lunch breaks, as well as outdoor Sport and PE lessons.

No hat—No play!

Students are also expected to wear their hats while walking to and from the pool for their weekly swimming lessons.

Please make sure your child has their hat with them at school, at all times.

On Monday the 9th of November the whole school participated in the house athletics. Students came dressed in their house colours and were involved in three events. These included hurdles, sprints and sack races. It was great to see the students supporting their friend and competing in the races. The results of the day were as follows:

1st place – Bakewell
2nd place – Russell
3rd place – Childers
4th place – Cameron

A big thank you and congratulations to Mr. Peel for organising a very successful event.
Suggestions for addressing children and young peoples’ responses in relation to traumatic events such as the terrorist attacks in Paris.

1. Reassure children that they are safe. The consistency of the images can be frightening for young children who don’t understand the notion of distance and have difficulty distinguishing between reality and fiction. Let them know that while this event is indeed happening it will not affect them directly.

2. Explain what happened. Sounds obvious but it’s important not to simply assume that children and young people understand what’s happened. Be calm and stick the facts, using a map to show older children where it happened.

3. Be available. Let kids know that it is okay to talk about the unpleasant events. Listen to what they think and feel. By listening, you can find out if they have misunderstandings, and you can learn more about the support that they need. You do not need to explain more than they are ready to hear, but be willing to answer their questions.

4. Help children process what they see and hear, particularly through television. Children are good observers but can be poor interpreters of events that are out of their level of understanding.

5. Support children’s concerns for others. They may have genuine concerns for the suffering that will occur and they may need an outlet for those concerns. It is heartwarming to see this empathy in children for the concerns of others.

6. Let them explore feelings beyond fear. Many children may feel sad or even angry with these events so let them express the full range of emotions.

7. Avoid keeping the television on all the time. The visual nature of the media means that images are repeated over and over, which can be both distressing to some and desensitising to others.

8. Be aware of your own actions. Children will take their cues from you and if they see you focusing on it in an unhealthy way then they will focus on it too. Let them know that it is happening but it should not dominate their lives.

Children’s worlds can be affected in ways that we can’t even conceive of so adults need to be both sensitive to children’s needs and mindful of what they say and how they act in front of children.

In difficult times, it is worth remembering what adults and children need most are each other.

Parents using kids as bargaining chips

By Michael Grose

It’s been said that children are the unwitting victims of a breakdown between partners, but it doesn’t take a separation for kids to be caught up in their parents’ disputes.

In particular, kids of all ages can be impacted by games of one-upmanship that can be played out even when parents are together.

It happens when one parent criticises the other parent’s child-rearing either verbally or non-verbally: a raised eyebrow can send a strong message. This type of criticism creates doubt and uncertainty in children.

It happens when one parent intentionally overindulges children by buying them toys, gadgets and clothes or granting them excessive freedom out of spite. Competitiveness and disloyalty cause confusion and unhappiness in children.

It happens when a parent withholds affection and attention to children to punish their partner for some transgressions they may have committed. Callousness leads to feelings of unhappiness and guilt in children.

Consistency is the greatest gift parents can give

Kids crave consistency from their parents. They love to be able to predict how their parents will raise them as this puts them in control, which is vital for their healthy development. When they grow up in a predictable, caring environment they are more likely to take the learning risks necessary to grow and develop. In unstable, unpredictable environments kids either go into their shells to keep safe or they rebel. Consistency requires parents to use predictable routines, to stick to a known set of rules and to act always in their children’s best interests when raising them.
Avoid negative partnership spill over

Families have many relationships within them. Parents have relationships with children as individuals and as a group. Children also have relationships with each other and with each parent, if there are two. Parents also have a relationship with each other, which can be compromised when there is family breakdown. The challenge for parents is to prevent a breakdown in their relationship impacting on their other relationships including each person’s relationship with children. Positive parent relationships also have a positive effect on children’s learning and wellbeing. Conversely, anecdotal evidence suggests that the spill over to children from their parents’ negative relationships is significant indeed in terms of negatively impacting children’s learning and their wellbeing.

Kids are mood detectives

If two parents are in dispute there is an absolute imperative for the parents to keep the breakdown or conflict between themselves and to minimise the negative spill over to children. Inevitably, children will experience a tension if it exits between couples no matter how well their parents try to keep a dispute private. Kids are mood detectives. They’re generally better than we think at picking up the nuances of relationship tensions.

Stick to the business of parenting

It helps if parents in dispute can stick to the business of parenting and don’t confuse it with the business of partnering. If a parent isn’t getting along with a partner, then this is a problem to be worked out between them. Acting in the best interests of children means that we separate the partnering from the parenting when it comes to childrearing. This means that parents may have to compromise about many issues ranging from the straightforward, such as bedtimes, to more complex issues such as how best to manage children’s behaviour. Giving some ground to the other parent maybe problematic when relationships are troubled, but it’s not impossible. Plenty of separated couples do so successfully by consciously putting their children’s best interest before their own.

Putting aside differences in children’s best interests

Relationship breakdown can bring out the worst and the best in people. It brings out the worst when parents put their individual interest before their children’s, particularly when they interact with each other. Parents show their best side when they don’t let emotions rule their heads when they are in dispute with their partner. That means refraining from using kids as bargaining chips when interacting with their partner or ex-partner. Instead they stick to the business of parenting and make decisions in the very best interests of their children rather than their own interests. That’s the adult thing to do.
This event is an integral part of the enrolment process and every Parent and their Child should attend.

A general information session in V BLOCK will begin at 7pm sharp.

Parents will stay in V Block while your child goes off to spend time with their Pastoral Care Teacher in their classrooms.
